

Mussie Delelegn Arega is Senior Economic Affairs Officer and Chief of Landlocked Developing Countries' (LLDCs) Section in the Division for Africa, LDCs and Special Programmes at UNCTAD. His background is in economics and finance and has been working on trade and development related issues at UNCTAD for more than 20 years. Currently, he is responsible for analytical, technical cooperation and normative work of UNCTAD with implications for trade and development interests of LLDCs. Over the years, he has also led the conceptualization, development, and implementation of various country-specific and regional projects of UNCTAD, including the one on Productive Capacities Index (PCI).

Nour Barnat currently serves as Statistician, chief of method unit at UNCTAD carrying out statistical, methodological and analytical work related to international trade, development, maritime transport and SDGs indicators. Her work focuses on projects to advance the measurement of international trade in services mainly for West African countries and world international merchandise trade, countries SDGs costing and financing strategy. She is also in charge of development and compiling of composite indexes related to inclusive growth and productive capacities. Before coming to UNCTAD, she worked as university as a teacher of econometrics, statistics, micro and macro economics, and as a consultant at International Labour Organization carrying out research on multi-party employment arrangements and domestic work. She is also performing research on trade, social statistics such as informal employment in African countries, world population and inequalities.